

TB Skin Testing

PPD (purified protein derivative) is the solution used for TB skin testing. TB skin testing is not a vaccination and does not protect against tuberculosis. Travelers should be skin tested before foreign travel, to establish a negative baseline and then again 12-16 weeks after returning to the United States. Some companies and educational programs require TB skin testing as well.